

Ralph was real excited in a big way.

Charlie Brown was waiting

Ralph.

"What in the hell is this?" (Pase).

A little backed off, was very impatient.

He didn't know who the two pilots + mechanics were.
He didn't know who to talk to. He jumped into his conversation with.

"Sit down. Let me tell you what I'm doing because I'm leaving."

A little abrupt.

Not "damn it Ben I don't have time for this."

Not helicopters.

"I don't have time" - I don't know.

He was out character that day.

I've never seen him quite like that. He was excited.

He'd done a lot of stuff on his own.

He was disturbed. Correct.

Summary: Ralph was excited, impatient and abrupt, but not disrespectful to Perot.
